The Peter Wall Institute for Advanced Studies is pleased to announce an evening of dialogue about the impact of the growth in neurocentric thinking - the worldview that situates the brain as the key organ that provides meaning to our lives.

The event concludes three days of discussion of this topic between scholars, writers and artists.

The evening begins with a dance performance by internationally acclaimed dance/literary artist Sarah Chase, and will be followed by three short presentations by scholars, and an interactive conversation between the audience and roundtable participants.

Admission is free. All that you need to do is to bring your brain.
